

Published by the Press Publishing Company.

TUESDAY EVENING, APRIL 12.

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE EVENING WORLD

(Including Postage)

PER MONTH.....$0.06

PER YEAR.....$0.60

VOL. 22.....No. 1,163

Entered at the Post Office at New York as second-class matter.

BRANCH OFFICES:

WORLD OFFICE—1267 BROADWAY

between 11th and 12th sts., New York

WORLD OFFICE—1327 10TH ST. AND

MADISON AVE.

BROOKLYN—309 WASHINGTON ST. HARLEM—

New Department, 125 West 125th St. Advertisements at 251 East 110th St.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—LEADER BUILDING, 112

South 6th St. WASHINGTON—810 14th St.

LONDON OFFICE—25 COCKSPUR ST., TRAFAL-

GAR SQUARE.

A GAIN OF 77,699.

WORLDS PRINTED

EVERY DAY OF MARCH.

The number of Worlds printed each day every day of March, 1891 and 1892, was as follows:

	1891.	1892.
March 1.....	247,040*	847,240
" 2.....	268,900	419,540
" 3.....	295,630	387,950
" 4.....	300,420	371,700
" 5.....	302,040	385,050
" 6.....	303,210	262,700*
" 7.....	304,260	374,110
" 8.....	305,500	351,880
" 9.....	306,900	375,000
" 10.....	308,230	385,040
" 11.....	309,710	380,210
" 12.....	311,000	389,990
" 13.....	312,000	272,820*
" 14.....	313,000	382,910
" 15.....	314,000	384,520
" 16.....	315,000	382,230
" 17.....	316,000	477,080
" 18.....	317,000	378,400
" 19.....	318,000	382,560
" 20.....	319,000	386,890
" 21.....	320,000	375,803
" 22.....	321,000	377,535
" 23.....	322,000	375,848
" 24.....	323,000	377,725
" 25.....	324,000	379,012
" 26.....	325,000	382,541
" 27.....	326,000	267,280*
" 28.....	327,000	414,433
" 29.....	328,000	383,141
" 30.....	329,000	379,415
" 31.....	330,000	382,243
Total.....	9,181,180	11,448,618
Wkly & Semi.....	680,890	649,730
Grand total.....	9,862,070	12,098,348

* Morning edition only.

AVERAGE NUMBER OF WORLDS

PRINTED PER DAY FOR MARCH,

1891.....312,570

AVERAGE PER DAY FOR MARCH,

1892.....390,269

NET GAIN PER DAY OF

77,699.

THE WORLD will not, under any circumstances, hold itself responsible for the return or safekeeping of any registered manuscripts or pictures, of whatsoever character or value. No exceptions will be made to this rule with regard to either writers or illustrators. For all the editor enters into correspondence concerning unsuitable manuscripts.

The Evening World Prints Associated Press News.

It's a wise bomb that knows its own Anarchist.

Report has it that Wrestler Meltdown is training Mr. BLAINE. Is it time to look out for somebody's throw-down?

With the best Street-Cleaning law the city ever had, of course New York will expect the cleanest streets it ever had.

FATTY will disinfect a rascally nephew, who has been alienating the affections of another man's wife to the neglect of his own. The nephew has roused unpleasant "music in the air" and it will cost him a pretty note if the diva sticks to her present tune.

Mrs. ANNIE ROUSE has died in West Virginia, aged one hundred and six years, and leaving more than 2,000 descendants. The family chorus must have been something remarkable when this mother's children and grandchildren rose to call her blessed.

New York's "high life" society receives its most crushing blow from Newburg. A colored man arrested for non-support of his wife lays all his trouble to his being laid astray by the fast company he fell into while he was coachman for a Gotham swell.

Boomers by thousands will rush into the new Cheyenne and Arapahoe lands, when they are opened next week. The rest of the country won't miss them, but many a man among them will miss all the new things he sees in the fresh settlement. So it has been with all such "booms."

Death caught yesterday a trio of men dining in a strangely diverse way. They were GEORGE HENRY WARREN, one of two survivors of the original social "Fratricide" in Judge John K. Bowen, who helped to defeat Bezzer and to promote GURRAY, Brig.-Gen. Thomas W. Sweney, who served notably well in the Mexican and civil wars.

SARAH BRENNARD could only get mad and cancel a few dates when her dog was refused entertainment at the Southern Hotel in St. Louis. LILLIAN RUSSELL's pet met the same refusal, but LILLIAN snuggled him in. Then she said, "I am so sorry he has to go," while at the same time she kept him tight and didn't let him go. The queen of comic opera is quite up to a situation which disgruntled the queen of tragedy.

ADUSE NOT RIGHTeous ZEAL.

It is an old saying that Satan is painted blacker than he really is. The clergyman of New York just now seem disposed to make the character of this city appear darker than the truth will warrant.

In point of good order, morality, respect for the law and safety to life and property New York is certainly the superior of London and the equal of any other large city in the world. If the disgusting orgies that disgrace London and implicate persons in the highest positions in society were practiced here there would be an outcry that would cost some of the offenders a leg.

There is, of course, much that needs reform in the city, and earnest efforts to remove evils and to insure a vigorous enforcement of just laws are always commendable. But intemperance and indiscriminate denunciations are never productive of good, and when indulged in from the pulpit are calculated to bring religion into disrepute. It is never wise to furnish bad men with weapons to use against those they regard as their natural enemies.

The police of New York are admittedly efficient, brave and faithful as a body. Crime seldom goes undetected here and criminals seldom escape arrest. If there is any reason to suspect individual members of the force of misconduct, it certainly is not expedient or beneficial to assail the integrity of the whole body. Vice and immorality prevail here, as in all other large cosmopolitan cities, but they do not fault themselves as brazenly before the eyes of the people as they do in European cities.

By all means let our churches do all they can in the cause of reform, but let them reflect whether they will not accomplish better work by moderation and persuasion than by fierce denunciations and exaggerations of the truth.

SHERIDAN, OF BATTLE ROW.

MR. MICHAEL SHERIDAN, not just now at large, is entitled to consideration as a man with something of the heroic stripe. This fact may not affect the quantity or quality of the other stripes to the wearing of which the law may yet condemn him when the precise outcome of the wounds by him inflicted upon one PHILIP WENHAM, of Battle Row, shall have been determined. Nevertheless it is a fact of interest and deserves practical recognition.

The circumstances hereto do not have to do with the stabbing of WENHAM. They touch a tauderer issue than that, and one well calculated to display the form of loyalty to a comrade and chivalry towards one of the weaker sex which is by them shown to exist even in the above-mentioned Battle Row. Mr. ED WHELAN is the comrade in the case. He is not at large any more than is Mr. SHERIDAN. But his detention is slightly more definite, and is left as a matter of responsibility upon the authorities at Sing Sing Prison.

Mr. WHELAN knows how long he will stay up. Mr. SHERIDAN is not yet sure, even, but that his trip up the river will finally be with the electric chair rising in dim mental perspective at the end of the journey. But this dreadful possibility was not enough to drive loyalty to friendship out of SHERIDAN's mind, and when WHELAN called on him for an emergency action he obeyed.

"Lepore, if you can, and take Rosy to the picnic," was the word from WHELAN. And SHERIDAN both could and did escape and he did take Rosy to the picnic. His success is not creditable to the vigilance of the officers of the Yorkville Court prison. But neither that fact nor the details of the escape have any bearing on the heroic element which enters into the affair.

The point is that SHERIDAN did not fall when friendship demanded and beauty needed his prompt service. Circumstances seemed to be against him. But he, at duty's call, rose superior to iron bars, stone walls and other things which are ordinarily put together to make a prison.

Perhaps it is not permissible to compare SHERIDAN's exploit to Leander's swimming of the Hellespont. The hero for whom he braved the jailers and the police was another's. His accomplishment was one not of rivalry, but of chivalric devotion to a friend in distress. And when his duty was done and the picnic past, he submitted quietly to recapture and rejauling. The deed is worthy of such an epic as Greek poets of old might have indited.

SHERIDAN, of Battle Row, should be immortalized as the man who broke jail rather than disappoint a comrade.

NO HAIR-SPLITTING NECESSARY. The Police Commissioners have requested the District-Attorney to supply them with a transcript of the evidence in which the recent important presentment of the Grand Jury was based, in order that they may discover what members of the force are implicated in the charge of receiving money to protect immorality and lawlessness. The District-Attorney hesitates to comply with the request, being uncertain as to his legal authority to do so.

The secrets of the Grand Jury room are properly guarded by the law, both for the protection of innocent persons and to prevent the escape of those against whom indictments may be found. But after a presentment has been made public it can scarcely be intended that evidence required to promote the ends of justice should be withheld from the proper authorities.

The Police Commissioners are sincere in their professed desire to discover the guilty parties, if there are any, and certainly the District-Attorney's duty is to give them all the assistance in his power.

THE BASEBALL SEASON OPEN.

To-day the regular baseball season opens with the first championship games of the National League. It does not come upon the people with a pronounced "hurrah." It does not come with the promise of an intense and sustained interest in the pennant struggle which used to delight the heart of the confirmed baseball crank. To state this is not crying down the game. It is calling attention to a fact which is deeply to be regretted, but which must be thoroughly realized before baseball can be built up again.

Interest in the National game increased by marked stages up to 1889. In that year it reached a fever height. The very success of that season and the exaggerated ideas which it put into some minds as to the further possibilities of profit in the baseball line undoubtedly had much to do with the bringing about of the proceeding which have caused the interest to drop steadily since 1889.

This year a double season, a shaking up of teams and other expedients have been resorted to in the hope of reviving the old public feeling over the sport. But these are not enough. The people have been treated to a view, under strong lights, of the money side of the baseball question. It will not be an easy task to bring them again to believe in the matter's contents on the diamond as matters of pure sport.

SAVING AN HONORED GRAVE.

The people of Virginia have been anxiously watching the progress of a case in their courts involving the right of a party of speculators to make money out of the purchase and sale of the lot at Fredericksburg containing the grave of Washington's mother. Some three years ago a firm of real estate brokers secured an option for the purchase of the lot for $2,500 and sold it to a Baltimore man for $20,000. The people indignantly protested against this dicker, which they regarded as a sacrilege, and the result was the breaking of the original contract and a suit for damages.

The Circuit Court has already decided that the spot containing the grave of the mother of Washington could not be made the subject of a speculative sale, and it is to be hoped that the Supreme Court of Appeals will sustain the decision. Every good American will endorse this hope. There ought at least to be enough patriotic feeling in the United States to prevent the desecration of such a sacred spot.

THE POOR WILL BE MADE TO PAY IT.

The story comes from California that CLAUDE SPRECKELS, the sugar millionaire, made clear $5,000,000 by abandoning his fight against the Sugar Trust and becoming one of the monopolists. The plain meaning of this is that the Trust has practically thrown away $5,000,000, and this sum will have to be made up out of the people. This will be the easier because in the "deal" the Trust gets rid of a wealthy, independent competitor strong enough to exercise an important restraint on the increase of prices.

The Trust has all along pretended to be able to get along without SPRECKELS and has signified its intention to drive the "California millionaire out of the business. It cannot, therefore, need his costly subsidies as an addition to its plant. The object is simply to buy out his opposition.

The Trust, having "dodged" the law through the aid of sharp lawyers, seems to have everything its own way at present. The fight which is engaged with a few wholesale grocers amounts to nothing, because the latter are simply seeking to advance their own selfish interests. But when the Trust begins to make up the $5,000,000 paid for SPRECKELS' by increasing the retail price of sugar to the poor consumer it may find a popular opposition quite as dangerous as any it has yet encountered.

The Rhode Island Legislature seriously considers a bill to absolutely prohibit the attendance at theatres, even with parents or guardians, of children under thirteen. Well, even New York's Legislature has done strange things.

HOME RULE FOR WIVES

Some Varied Opinions on How They Should Be Managed.

The Discussion Will Close at Noon Next Thursday.

No Letters Received After That Hour Are Eligible For the Prize.

THE EVENING WORLD will give a gift double in value to the writer who shows best "HOW TO MANAGE A WIFE." The plan must be contained in two hundred words, written on one side of the paper, have the writer's name and address (not necessarily for publication), and be directed to WIFE EDITOR, THE EVENING WORLD, P. O. Box 2,354.

Just Fool Her.

Let your wife think she is managing you and the secret of wise-management is solved.

Mirror Your Management.

A wife is the mirror of her husband's management. If this harsh word must be used, let him therefore treat her as he would have his reflection cast, and we know no man desires himself portrayed other than bright, cheerful and loving. In attaining this desire he will indeed not only manage his wife but himself.

The Old Sweetheart Idea.

Manage your wife as you did your sweetheart, for had she been displeased with your management while courting she would never have become your wife. Remember that before marriage you spent considerable time thinking what you could do to please her. Think on the same subject now, and after thinking—act. Give her a little more than you think she will need to run the house, and the balance (if there is one) put in your bank or invest, as you see fit. You will be glad to consult her. If you find it impossible to get your teeth through the biscuits, blame your teeth. If the coffee is too strong, blame your digestion, and my word for it—happiness will reign supreme.

She Needs More than Careses.

Of course you must love her, otherwise it would not be worth while trying to manage her. Provide for her comfort as well as for your own. She will ask no more. Try to brighten her life by your cheerful ways. Remember that household cares are often trifles, and there are times when a bright little story might do her much good. Woman's more wife, and so close to each other that with a thread of color shows between, they slightly trained belt skirt is of the novelty with the stripes diagonal, and have a three-cornered breadth of velvet set in the back, and the edge bordered with velvet. The coat of velvet reaches below the knee, and has some fronts open over a long vest of the novelty with the stripes horizontal. The vest is bordered with an applique of black and gray passementerie. The coat sleeve has a flaring Louis Quinze cuff of the novelty bordered with passementerie.

Love and Trust Her as an Equal.

How to manage a wife? Love her with all your heart. Trust her as your equal and she will respect you and conduct her house as your own and respect will turn to admiration and confidence. Trust her implicitly and let her share your joys and sorrows. Her sense of duty will make her redouble her respect, admiration, duty and confidence combined will place you in her esteem, where you would not be as her husband, and she will realize your love for her and will give her gladly in return. That once obtained, appreciation and value as it deserves, will be her reward. This prescription is not palatable to most men.

Don't Expect Her to Be Reasonable.

First to husbands, don't expect your wives to be reasonable. Let them be unreasonable. Don't take them too seriously when they get out of temper and fretful. After all, the higher education and refined culture a woman gets, the more she will be inclined to be a poor, tired, capricious, naughty little girl. At such times she must not be frowned on or treated as she would be by a man. Give her gentle arms and kind and petted and taken care of. No woman uses to be "babied" when she is in love and when she is loved. When she is in love and when she is loved, she does like it, and loves it when she is treated as "a cross as two sticks," and as "incapacitated." No dignity is lost, and life is made much easier, though presently your wife, who promised to love, honor and obey you, and who probably made her husband a man, you put her tired arms around your neck and says, "I love you, I love you, I love you, and that's all."

HOME RULE FOR WIVES

Some Varied Opinions on How They Should Be Managed.

The Discussion Will Close at Noon Next Thursday.

No Letters Received After That Hour Are Eligible For the Prize.

THE EVENING WORLD will give a gift double in value to the writer who shows best "HOW TO MANAGE A WIFE." The plan must be contained in two hundred words, written on one side of the paper, have the writer's name and address (not necessarily for publication), and be directed to WIFE EDITOR, THE EVENING WORLD, P. O. Box 2,354.

Just Fool Her.

Let your wife think she is managing you and the secret of wise-management is solved.

Mirror Your Management.

A wife is the mirror of her husband's management. If this harsh word must be used, let him therefore treat her as he would have his reflection cast, and we know no man desires himself portrayed other than bright, cheerful and loving. In attaining this desire he will indeed not only manage his wife but himself.

The Old Sweetheart Idea.

Manage your wife as you did your sweetheart, for had she been displeased with your management while courting she would never have become your wife. Remember that before marriage you spent considerable time thinking what you could do to please her. Think on the same subject now, and after thinking—act. Give her a little more than you think she will need to run the house, and the balance (if there is one) put in your bank or invest, as you see fit. You will be glad to consult her. If you find it impossible to get your teeth through the biscuits, blame your teeth. If the coffee is too strong, blame your digestion, and my word for it—happiness will reign supreme.

She Needs More than Careses.

Of course you must love her, otherwise it would not be worth while trying to manage her. Provide for her comfort as well as for your own. She will ask no more. Try to brighten her life by your cheerful ways. Remember that household cares are often trifles, and there are times when a bright little story might do her much good. Woman's more wife, and so close to each other that with a thread of color shows between, they slightly trained belt skirt is of the novelty with the stripes diagonal, and have a three-cornered breadth of velvet set in the back, and the edge bordered with velvet. The coat of velvet reaches below the knee, and has some fronts open over a long vest of the novelty with the stripes horizontal. The vest is bordered with an applique of black and gray passementerie. The coat sleeve has a flaring Louis Quinze cuff of the novelty bordered with passementerie.

Love and Trust Her as an Equal.

How to manage a wife? Love her with all your heart. Trust her as your equal and she will respect you and conduct her house as your own and respect will turn to admiration and confidence. Trust her implicitly and let her share your joys and sorrows. Her sense of duty will make her redouble her respect, admiration, duty and confidence combined will place you in her esteem, where you would not be as her husband, and she will realize your love for her and will give her gladly in return. That once obtained, appreciation and value as it deserves, will be her reward. This prescription is not palatable to most men.

Don't Expect Her to Be Reasonable.

First to husbands, don't expect your wives to be reasonable. Let them be unreasonable. Don't take them too seriously when they get out of temper and fretful. After all, the higher education and refined culture a woman gets, the more she will be inclined to be a poor, tired, capricious, naughty little girl. At such times she must not be frowned on or treated as she would be by a man. Give her gentle arms and kind and petted and taken care of. No woman uses to be "babied" when she is in love and when she is loved. When she is in love and when she is loved, she does like it, and loves it when she is treated as "a cross as two sticks," and as "incapacitated." No dignity is lost, and life is made much easier, though presently your wife, who promised to love, honor and obey you, and who probably made her husband a man, you put her tired arms around your neck and says, "I love you, I love you, I love you, and that's all."

The Old Sweetheart Idea.

Manage your wife as you did your sweetheart, for had she been displeased with your management while courting she would never have become your wife. Remember that before marriage you spent considerable time thinking what you could do to please her. Think on the same subject now, and after thinking—act. Give her a little more than you think she will need to run the house, and the balance (if there is one) put in your bank or invest, as you see fit. You will be glad to consult her. If you find it impossible to get your teeth through the biscuits, blame your teeth. If the coffee is too strong, blame your digestion, and my word for it—happiness will reign supreme.

She Needs More than Careses.

Of course you must love her, otherwise it would not be worth while trying to manage her. Provide for her comfort as well as for your own. She will ask no more. Try to brighten her life by your cheerful ways. Remember that household cares are often trifles, and there are times when a bright little story might do her much good. Woman's more wife, and so close to each other that with a thread of color shows between, they slightly trained belt skirt is of the novelty with the stripes diagonal, and have a three-cornered breadth of velvet set in the back, and the edge bordered with velvet. The coat of velvet reaches below the knee, and has some fronts open over a long vest of the novelty with the stripes horizontal. The vest is bordered with an applique of black and gray passementerie. The coat sleeve has a flaring Louis Quinze cuff of the novelty bordered with passementerie.

Love and Trust Her as an Equal.

How to manage a wife? Love her with all your heart. Trust her as your equal and she will respect you and conduct her house as your own and respect will turn to admiration and confidence. Trust her implicitly and let her share your joys and sorrows. Her sense of duty will make her redouble her respect, admiration, duty and confidence combined will place you in her esteem, where you would not be as her husband, and she will realize your love for her and will give her gladly in return. That once obtained, appreciation and value as it deserves, will be her reward. This prescription is not palatable to most men.

Don't Expect Her to Be Reasonable.

First to husbands, don't expect your wives to be reasonable. Let them be unreasonable. Don't take them too seriously when they get out of temper and fretful. After all, the higher education and refined culture a woman gets, the more she will be inclined to be a poor, tired, capricious, naughty little girl. At such times she must not be frowned on or treated as she would be by a man. Give her gentle arms and kind and petted and taken care of. No woman uses to be "babied" when she is in love and when she is loved. When she is in love and when she is loved, she does like it, and loves it when she is treated as "a cross as two sticks," and as "incapacitated." No dignity is lost, and life is made much easier, though presently your wife, who promised to love, honor and obey you, and who probably made her husband a man, you put her tired arms around your neck and says, "I love you, I love you, I love you, and that's all."

The Old Sweetheart Idea.

Manage your wife as you did your sweetheart, for had she been displeased with your management while courting she would never have become your wife. Remember that before marriage you spent considerable time thinking what you could do to please her. Think on the same subject now, and after thinking—act. Give her a little more than you think she will need to run the house, and the balance (if there is one) put in your bank or invest, as you see fit. You will be glad to consult her. If you find it impossible to get your teeth through the biscuits, blame your teeth. If the coffee is too strong, blame your digestion, and my word for it—happiness will reign supreme.

She Needs More than Careses.

Of course you must love her, otherwise it would not be worth while trying to manage her. Provide for her comfort as well as for your own. She will ask no more. Try to brighten her life by your cheerful ways. Remember that household cares are often trifles, and there are times when a bright little story might do her much good. Woman's more wife, and so close to each other that with a thread of color shows between, they slightly trained belt skirt is of the novelty with the stripes diagonal, and have a three-cornered breadth of velvet set in the back, and the edge bordered with velvet. The coat of velvet reaches below the knee, and has some fronts open over a long vest of the novelty with the stripes horizontal. The vest is bordered with an applique of black and gray passementerie. The coat sleeve has a flaring Louis Quinze cuff of the novelty bordered with passementerie.

Love and Trust Her as an Equal.

How to manage a wife? Love her with all your heart. Trust her as your equal and she will respect you and conduct her house as your own and respect will turn to admiration and confidence. Trust her implicitly and let her share your joys and sorrows. Her sense of duty will make her redouble her respect, admiration, duty and confidence combined will place you in her esteem, where you would not be as her husband, and she will realize your love for her and will give her gladly in return. That once obtained, appreciation and value as it deserves, will be her reward. This prescription is not palatable to most men.

Don't Expect Her to Be Reasonable.

First to husbands, don't expect your wives to be reasonable. Let them be unreasonable. Don't take them too seriously when they get out of temper and fretful. After all, the higher education and refined culture a woman gets, the more she will be inclined to be a poor, tired, capricious, naughty little girl. At such times she must not be frowned on or treated as she would be by a man. Give her gentle arms and kind and petted and taken care of. No woman uses to be "babied" when she is in love and when she is loved. When she is in love and when she is loved, she does like it, and loves it when she is treated as "a cross as two sticks," and as "incapacitated." No dignity is lost, and life is made much easier, though presently your wife, who promised to love, honor and obey you, and who probably made her husband a man, you put her tired arms around your neck and says, "I love you, I love you, I love you, and that's all."

The Old Sweetheart Idea.

Manage your wife as you did your sweetheart, for had she been displeased with your management while courting she would never have become your wife. Remember that before marriage you spent considerable time thinking what you could do to please her. Think on the same subject now, and after thinking—act. Give her a little more than you think she will need to run the house, and the balance (if there is one) put in your bank or invest, as you see fit. You will be glad to consult her. If you find it impossible to get your teeth through the biscuits, blame your teeth. If the coffee is too strong, blame your digestion, and my word for it—happiness will reign supreme.

She Needs More than Careses.

Of course you must love her, otherwise it would not be worth while trying to manage her. Provide for her comfort as well as for your own. She will ask no more. Try to brighten her life by your cheerful ways. Remember that household cares are often trifles, and there are times when a bright little story might do her much good. Woman's more wife, and so close to each other that with a thread of color shows between, they slightly trained belt skirt is of the novelty with the stripes diagonal, and have a three-cornered breadth of velvet set in the back, and the edge bordered with velvet. The coat of velvet reaches below the knee, and has some fronts open over a long vest of the novelty with the stripes horizontal. The vest is bordered with an applique of black and gray passementerie. The coat sleeve has a flaring Louis Quinze cuff of the novelty bordered with passementerie.

Love and Trust Her as an Equal.

How to manage a wife? Love her with all your heart. Trust her as your equal and she will respect you and conduct her house as your own and respect will turn to admiration and confidence. Trust her implicitly and let her share your joys and sorrows. Her sense of duty will make her redouble her respect, admiration, duty and confidence combined will place you in her esteem, where you would not be as her husband, and she will realize your love for her and will give her gladly in return. That once obtained, appreciation and value as it deserves, will be her reward. This prescription is not palatable to most men.

Don't Expect Her to Be Reasonable.

First to husbands, don't expect your wives to be reasonable. Let them be unreasonable. Don't take them too seriously when they get out of temper and fretful. After all, the higher education and refined culture a woman gets, the more she will be inclined to be a poor, tired, capricious, naughty little girl. At such times she must not be frowned on or treated as she would be by a man. Give her gentle arms and kind and petted and taken care of